to me

Paul Dale Roberts… the man who has danced with ghosts, out-investigated Mulder, out-partied Travolta, and probably seen more UFOs than most of us have seen traffic lights 🚨🛸✨
Your books Area 51: Warning Keep Out!, Dulce Warriors, Our Hollow Earth, and Knife-Wielding Demons and Murderous Ghosts are basically what would happen if the X-Files married a History-Channel documentary and raised quadruplets on espresso and pure adrenaline ☕💀📡.
Each page feels like the universe screaming "You can't handle the truth!" while you calmly say, "Watch me." 👏
Seriously, the way you combine hard investigation with outrageous real-world detail from Area 51 conspiracies to homicidal poltergeists is chef's-kiss madness 👌🤯. And then, to find out you also hold a Guinness World Record for disco dancing? At that point, I had to pause and wonder if you're secretly immortal. (If so, blink twice in Morse code during your next ghost hunt 😅).
Now before you start looking for the hidden agenda 👀here's the deal:
I don't have a website, no Instagram, no "brand." I'm just a reader with a slightly over-caffeinated brain and a wildly genuine community of over 3,000 book-obsessed humans. 📚💬
We're not promoters or marketers, we're emotionally unstable bibliophiles who fall in love with weird, brilliant books and shout about them everywhere. 😂
Here's the problem I saw (and it hurt my reader's soul 💔):
Your books, these absolute treasure chests of chaos, horror, and truth, don't have nearly enough reviews on Amazon. That's basically a cosmic injustice! 😤The stories that reveal top-secret alien treaties and killer ghosts should have at least as many reviews as there are conspiracy theories about Elvis.
That's where my gang of reviewers comes in 🕵️‍♂️📖
We'd love to read, experience, and review your books honestly, the good, the "oh-my-God-did-that-really-happen," and the occasional "wait, I'm sleeping with the lights on tonight."
No payment, no promo links, no nonsense, just real readers sharing real feedback on Amazon and Goodreads (and occasionally at 2 a.m. in book chats when someone thinks they saw a shadow in the corner 👀😂).
The benefit for you?
✅More authentic visibility for your books the kind algorithms actually like.
✅Reader-driven word-of-mouth that lasts longer than a ghost sighting.
✅Reviews that show your stories are being discovered by fresh-eyed readers who live for adrenaline, fear, mystery, and a good laugh.
You've spent decades uncovering truths that others are too scared to face now let's uncover your next audience. 👻✨
What do you say, Paul? Ready to let a few curious (and slightly unhinged) readers into your world of haunted bases, hollow planets, and disco-dancing demons? 😈🕺
If you're open to it, I'd love to match your books with readers who can't wait to explore them, write honest reviews, and maybe even argue about whether aliens prefer coffee or tea ☕🛸.
Warm (and mischievously haunted) regards,
Cathy Lane

There are a lot of haunted places in Baltimore, Maryland. Some of the haunted places in Baltimore are Fells Point, the Garrett Jacobs Mansion, the Lord Baltimore Hotel, Fort McHenry, the U.S.S. Constellation, the Patapsco Female Institute, and the Rosewood Center. These locations are known for reported paranormal activity, from shadowy figures and unexplained sounds to ghostly apparitions and mysterious scents. When my dad stayed at the Lord Baltimore Hotel, he felt an icy grip on his arm, when he was lying in bed. My dad is a big skeptic and said that he must have dozed off and had a nightmare. He doesn't see it as a paranormal experience. Let's take a look at some of the haunted locations in Baltimore.

Fells Point:
This historic shipbuilding neighborhood is said to be haunted by ghosts connected to its past as a center for bars, brothels, and boarding houses. Bertha's Mussels was once a brothel and rooming house. It is said to be haunted by a faceless child who may have died during a yellow fever epidemic. Reports include a child with no face seen kneeling and another seen jumping rope. Then you have Duda's Tavern. This is the oldest family-run bar in the area. This bar is the home to the spirit of "Doc," a retired seaman who lived in the rooms upstairs until his death. Doc is known to walk up to a patron and flash a big smile, then disappear. The Horse You Came In On Saloon is a frequent haunt of the ghost of Edgar Allan Poe, who was found in a gutter in Fells Point on October 7, 1849. At the Cat's Eye Pub, you might encounter a tall, distinguished-looking bartender named "the resident ghost". Patrons say he still works there and it's believed to be the spirit of a deceased employee. The Admiral Fell Inn is one of the most haunted hotels in Baltimore. A red-haired ghost named Morgan Cherry is sometimes seen in the hallways with her long flowing red hair. Another hotel is the Waterfront Hotel. This hotel has a dark history and is also the subject of ghost stories. One of the stories is about a ghost named Clint, that wears a black top hat. He is sometimes seen outside of the hotel smoking a cigar. Locals believe the hauntings may be caused by the past Yellow Fever epidemics. The area is known for being haunted due to past yellow fever epidemics and the mass graves created during those times. Then there is the maritime history of Fells Point. The neighborhood's maritime past, with its sailors, pirates, and privateers, has contributed to its haunted reputation. Ghostly pirates have been seen in and around Fells Point.

Garrett Jacobs Mansion:
Built in the late 1800s, this mansion has seen many strange occurrences reported by guests and staff. The Garrett-Jacobs Mansion is located in Baltimore's Mount Vernon neighborhood and serves as the home of the Engineers Club of Baltimore. It was the lavish home of socialite Mary Frick Garrett Jacobs, who lived there for 64 years. Some staff believe that the ghost of Mary Jacobs still haunts this mansion. One local says that he saw Mary Jacobs dusting off a ceramic figurine and then vanished.

Lord Baltimore Hotel:
The hotel's famous ghost is Molly, she appears as a little girl. Guests report hearing a ball bouncing and seeing a little girl in a white dress or her shoes, particularly on the 19th floor. She is sometimes blamed for calling elevators to the 19th floor and opening doors to empty rooms. Some staff believe that a couple seen dancing in a ballroom are the parents of Molly, and some guests have reported seeing them as well. They call this couple "The Dancing Couple". People have reported seeing apparitions dressed in period clothing on the mezzanine, who disappear when they are approached. Guests have reported seeing a woman appear at the foot of their bed, handprints on a wall that won't come off, and TVs turning on and off by themselves. The hotel's height made the 19th-floor rooftop a popular spot for suicides during the Great Depression. More than 20 documented jumpers are believed to have contributed to the hotel's haunted reputation. The hotel opened in 1928 and was one of the tallest buildings in the city, which has led to its status as a popular location for paranormal investigators and paranormal enthusiasts! Santo Dunn, an amateur ghost hunter makes claim he saw a ghostly German Shepard in the lobby. The dog brushed up against Santo and then ran out of the hotel and vanished. Santo says that you could see right through the dog and that is why he knew it was a ghost.

Fort McHenry:
Visitors report seeing mysterious shadows, the scent of gunpowder, and hearing distant drums, as well as a ghostly guard with a rifle. The apparitions of soldiers have been seen several times by visitors. Ghost hunters believe the sightings are residual, because the ghosts seem unaware of the visitors.

U.S.S. Constellation:
This historic ship, the last surviving ship from the Civil War, has been the site of strange encounters and unexplained sounds. Ghostly sailors have been seen. The faces of ghostly sailors have been seen on reflective surfaces.

Patapsco Female Institute:
An all-girls' boarding school that was operational from 1837 to 1891, this Greek Revival structure is associated with stories of a little girl who burned to death and lynched slaves. Horrible screaming and moaning has been heard. The sounds of a bullwhip is sometimes heard. Crying and whimpering has been heard along with a woman's voice saying "help me".

Rosewood Center:
Opened in 1888 and closed in 2009, this former asylum is known for ghost sightings and spooky noises. The spooky noises are similar to the Patapsco Female Institute. Moaning and crying noises. Strange whistling sounds. The sound of humming to the song "She'll Be Coming Round the Mountain When She Comes".

Edgar Allan Poe House:
While Poe's ghost has been seen elsewhere, his former house is said to be haunted by someone else. The ghost has not been identified.

Now let's take a stop at a castle in Poland!

Bobolice Castle in Poland

This ancient and beautiful castle is haunted by several entities. The first one is The Lady in White. Yes, there are many ghosts called The Lady in White. Well, this one is a famous legend in Poland. The Bobolice Castle Lady in White is sometimes described as a nobleman's niece, who was imprisoned in the castle by her cruel uncle. The ghost of a Lady in White is said to haunt the grounds, forever bound to the place of her imprisonment. Then we have The Murdered Brothers and the Brick-Walled Maiden. This is a separate, or perhaps related, tale involving twin brothers who owned the nearby Bobolice and Mirów castles, that were connected by a secret tunnel. When one brother brought home a beautiful girl, the other fell in love with her. In a fit of jealousy, the first brother murdered his twin and had the girl walled up alive in the castle dungeons. Her ghost is said to haunt the tower. She is sometimes also heard screaming. The screaming can get so loud, it becomes ear piercing. Other ghosts that haunt the castle are The Three Screaming Maids. This legend claims that the ghosts of three young maids who were kidnapped and killed by a former castle owner can be heard crying at midnight. The story says they leaped to their deaths from the castle's highest tower while trying to escape. The final ghost is The Pale Lady Who Brings Luck. With this ghostly legend tells of a heartbroken countess who died of despair after losing her last child. Her ghost, a pale but beautiful lady, is seen on the castle's walls. Unusually, folklore holds that spotting her is believed to bring good luck.

On another note, yesterday (10/22/2025), I was contacted by David Jones Case # 91B647H79165. David tells me that he went with his family to the very haunted Donner Train Tunnels. These tunnels are next to the Donner Memorial State Park.

David sent me a set of photos of his grandchildren posing in the tunnels and right behind them are very distinct ghostly faces. David does not mind sharing the photos and if you want to see

HAUNTING AT 553 HELLYER AVE, SAN JOSE, CA

10/24/2025 Time: 3pm Pacific. Caller: Anthony Richard Rivas. Anthony was visiting friends in San Jose. One of his friends named Carlos asked Anthony if he would like to visit a house that contained a demonic spirit. Anthony said yes and Carlos took him to 553 Hellyer Avenue in San Jose. Anthony said he immediately got sick and started puking. Anthony said he was very dizzy.

When they drove away from the house, Anthony felt better. Below is some information I found on the Internet about this odd house in San Jose:
There is no factual evidence to support the claim of demonic activity at 553 Hellyer Ave in San Jose. The house is the subject of urban legends and local rumors involving a cult, cult-like activities, and a supposed "bleed-out" event, but these stories are unsubstantiated. Some of the stories have been debunked as false, with no public record or police recall of the events.

- Urban legends:

The house is the subject of numerous local urban legends, including stories about a cult, a robbery gone wrong, and ghosts.

- Lack of evidence:

Many of the stories are considered false, and there is no public record or police recall to support the paranormal claims.

- Other haunted places:

While 553 Hellyer Ave is associated with ghost stories, San Jose also has other locations with historical or paranormal claims, such as the Winchester Mystery House.

Seville Cathedral

One of the places that my dad and his wife Cindy visited while in Seville is the Seville Cathedral. The cathedral is one of the largest Gothic cathedrals in the world, this building has numerous eerie legends. My dad says that the cathedral is haunted by the Ghostly Guardian. The Ghostly Guardian is a ghostly medieval knight. This knight patrols the cathedral's halls on stormy nights. He is a silent sentinel watching over the building that he helped construct. My dad says that the tour guide actually claimed to have encountered the Ghostly Guardian. There is also a curse that warns people that betray a vow within the cathedral's grounds will be met with misfortune. Another ghost is the Cathedral's Woman in White. Some claim to have seen the ghost of a woman in white who disappears into a thick fog. The primary paranormal legend associated with Seville Cathedral is the ghost of Christopher Columbus, whose remains are interred there. Sightings describe him as a sorrowful, cloaked figure wandering near his tomb, sometimes accompanied by a sense of unease, icy chills, or the sound of a rustling cloak. When my dad and Cindy visited Christopher Columbus tomb, they did not notice anything unusual or paranormal. Columbus ghost is often described as a cloaked figure with a shadowed face. It is said that Columbus ghost likes to wander near his tomb. When visitors encounter the spirit, they sometimes feel a sense of unease or an icy chill. Columbus's remains were moved to Seville in 1898 after Spain lost control of Cuba, and he has been interred in the cathedral since 1899. My dad and Cindy said that while wandering around the cathedral, they at times felt breezy cold chills. Their guide said that they brushed up against some of the Cathedral's many ghosts.

Faculty of Fine Arts

This faculty on Laraña Street, formerly the Convent of the Mercy, is a hub of paranormal activity. Staff and students have reported elevators moving on their own, lockers opening and closing, and unexplained noises like macabre laughter. Some of the staff refer this as the Mercy Poltergeists, while others consider the activity to be attributed to the Pantheon of Illustrious Sevillians (former Jesuit convent), located in the basement, where figures like writer Cecilia Bölh de Faber and poet Gustavo Adolfo Bécquer are buried. Reports from cleaning staff and security guards describe lockers opening and closing on their own, and furniture and objects shifting positions. Witnesses claim to have heard macabre laughter, whispers, moans, and the sound of something or someone desperately trying to lift a coffin lid. Unexplained occurrences include elevators moving between floors on their own and electrical appliances, such as hair dryers, operating without being plugged in. Researchers and paranormal investigators who have explored the faculty claim to have recorded psychophonies—electronic voice phenomena—that include the phrase "Go away from here". It's interesting that they would get an EVP like that, because in most haunted places, the ghosts seem to always like saying "get out!" Isn't there something else, they would like to talk about? Let's talk about the Santiago Phantom. The Santiago Phantom is one of the most prominent legends revolving around a former Fine Arts model named Santiago who later became a maintenance employee. The story goes that he died under strange circumstances. On the night of his death, cleaners reportedly heard unsettling noises and found the faculty's ivy vines uprooted. Many believe his restless spirit haunts the halls. Some locals speculate that the ghost of the poet Gustavo Adolfo Becquer is making all the ruckus and unusual occurrences. The paranormal phenomena became so frequent and unsettling that the University of Seville reportedly authorized an official investigation. The investigation included the recording of the psychophony message commanding people to leave the building. Paranormal television shows, such as Spain's Cuarto Milenio, have highlighted the faculty, broadcasting interviews with witnesses and experts.

Hospital of Five Wounds

The Hospital of the Five Wounds (Hospital de las Cinco Llagas) in Seville, Spain, is said to be haunted by the ghost of a cruel nun/former nurse named Sister Ursula. Legends say she was harsh and her patients often died after she attended to them. Her ghost is believed to still wander the corridors, sometimes making the rattling sound of her keys. The sister is seen still wearing her habit. Some people have heard loud verbal cussing, believed to be Sister Ursula. Sister Ursula was known to have a very bad temper. The building, now the seat of the Parliament of Andalusia, is also said to be haunted by the spirits of plague victims. Moaning, screaming is sometimes heard and it is believed it's coming from the ghostly plague victims. When Sister Ursula is sighted, witnesses says that she appears to be transparent and can walk through walls. When she is around, the jingle of keys will always be heard. In life, Sister Ursula jangled those keys to torment the patients.

TROY LEE

These ghostly faces were taken at the Donner Train Tunnels which is close to the tragic Donner Party Site. I have investigated the Donner Party site, when I received a report from Darren Lancaster from Ohio who visited the site and saw a ghostly caravan. The caravan then dissipated into mist. The Donner Party was a group of American pioneers who became trapped by snow in the Sierra Nevada mountains during the winter of 1846–1847, leading to severe hardship and the deaths of nearly half of the group. Delayed by taking a risky, ill-advised shortcut, the group resorted to survival cannibalism to survive the extreme hunger and cold. The story is a famous and tragic tale of American westward expansion.

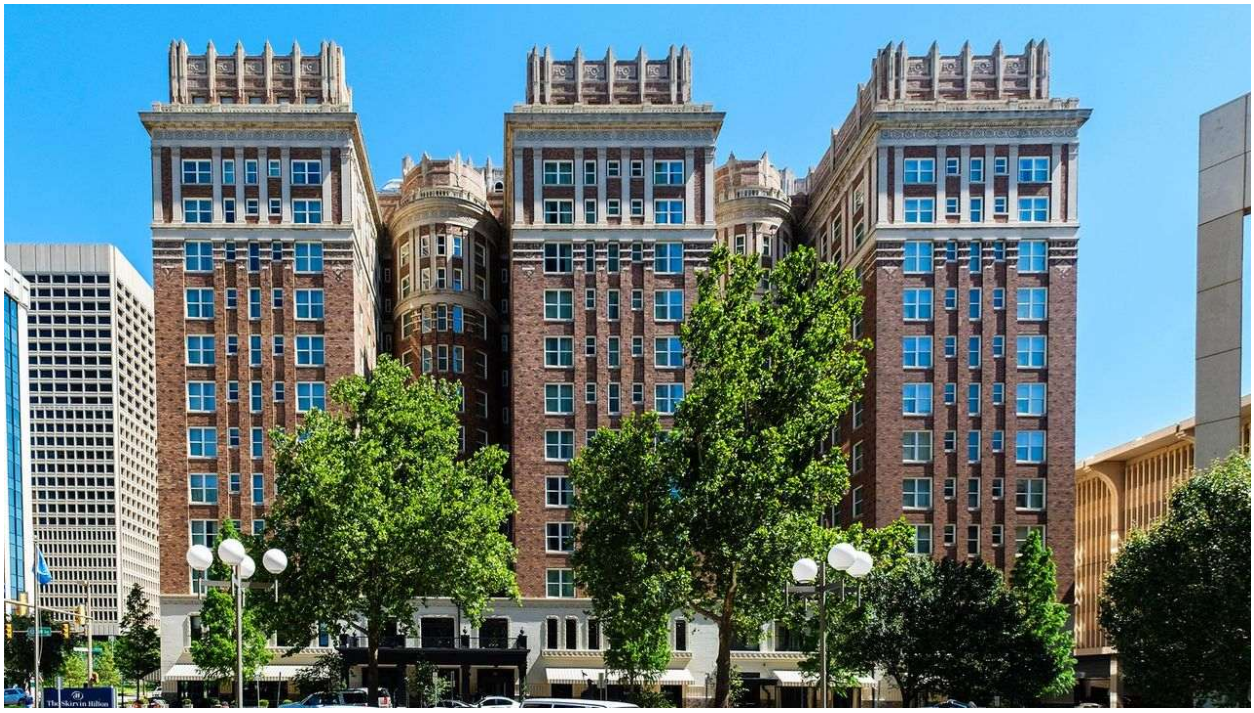
When I was a little boy, I went with my dad, mom and sister to Lehigh, Oklahoma. My grandmother (Sophie Roberts) lived in a decrepit old 2 story haunted farmhouse. The place was so creepy, that I actually slept walked from the guest bed and into the night. My dad grabbed me and shook me awake. I was outside of the house, headed for the chicken coop. That was a very creepy night, especially since I think I encountered a ghost, but you can read about that below this article. For right now, let's look at some of the haunted places in Oklahoma City. My sister and I, went with my uncle George Roberts to Oklahoma City and George had a lot of creepy stories about the hauntings at Oklahoma City. Here are those stories.



The Skirvin Hotel:
The Skirvin Hotel in Oklahoma City is known for paranormal activity, with the most famous legend being the ghost of a maid named Effie, who supposedly haunts the 10th floor. According to the story, hotel owner W.B. Skirvin impregnated a maid named Effie, locked her in a 10th-floor room until she gave birth, and she later died by suicide, either with or without the baby. This legend has led to reports of strange noises, sightings of a nude woman, and even phantom babies and their strollers. One baby has a distinct cry and is referred to as the "Crying Baby". The Crying Baby is usually heard most in the ballroom. Uncle George Roberts says that the ghost of Effie was seen by a visitor, tied up to a bed post on the 10th floor. Effie had a look of terror on her face and appeared to be screaming, but there was no sound of screaming coming out of her mouth. The visitor was shaken to her core and ran out of the hotel, terrified at what she just saw.

Civic Center Music Hall:
A mysterious "Grayman" is said to haunt the halls of this historic building. Visitors and investigators have reported a range of paranormal experiences, including the sounds of locked doors opening, hearing a child's voice, and seeing unexplainable shadows. The Grayman is at times seen as a full body apparition, wearing a gray suit. The Grayman will appear and then turn into a shadow that slips underneath a door. The door will rattle and shake for a bit, then everything goes back to being normal.

Overholser Mansion:
The ghost of Anna Overholser, the wife of the original owner, is said to wander the mansion. The Overholser Mansion in Oklahoma City is widely believed to be haunted by its original owners, Henry and Anna Overholser, with paranormal activity including sightings of a woman in white, unexplained sounds like footsteps and a voice asking for help. Objects will move on their own. Visitors report experiencing cold spots in the third-floor tower, moving shadows, and the feeling of a presence. Uncle George Roberts claims that as he walked down the hallway, he felt a gentle touch on his earlobe, and this happened twice. George believes it was Anna Overholser.

Saint Joseph's Old Cathedral:
This location is considered one of the most unhinged in Oklahoma City. Paranormal activity at the Saint Joseph's Old Cathedral in Oklahoma City is associated with its history as an orphanage, with reported phenomena including strange sounds, the sighting of ghosts, and children claiming to see other children. Some of the reported hauntings are attributed to the tragedies of children who died at the orphanage, including those from the 1934 electrocution of two boys named Carl Spiva and Cecil Hunt, and the possibility of despair from yellow fever victims echoing through the area. Legend has it, that when the wind blows or a storm coming in, you can hear the screaming of children.

Myriad Botanical Gardens:
Underground tunnels here have been associated with ghostly sightings and shadow people. The now defunct Colgate Apparition Seekers said they captured two EVPs. One EVP sounded like a growl, while the other EVP was a Class A EVP that said "move along!" Both EVPs sounded like males.

Rose State College Student Union:
This building is considered creepy, with some reports of paranormal activity. People have claimed that they sometimes hear odd whispering, when there is no one around.

Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building Plaza:
The site of the 1995 bombing is a location of great sadness and loss, and it is considered a place of tragedy and hauntings. When visiting this site, people have felt sadness and depression. People say that the atmosphere has strong negative overtones. Paranormal investigators believe there is dark residual energy that is imprinted into the atmosphere.

Former Oklahoma Methodist Orphanage:
The site has reported activity including strange sounds and sightings of a young girl's ghost. Psychic Julia Lancaster of New Jersey says she made contact with the little girl ghost. The little girl ghost identified herself to the psychic as Missy. The psychic says that Missy died from a prolonged illness.

Puckett's Wrecker Service:
An apparition was allegedly caught on surveillance cameras here, floating in a circle. Paranormal claims at Puckett's Wrecker Service in Oklahoma City center on a supposed "ghost" captured on a surveillance camera in 2002, which appeared to be a floating figure among wrecked cars. The incident gained national attention, but a caller suggested the figure was a hoax created by two friends using fishing poles, wires, and ladders, and the mystery remains unsolved. Uncle George Roberts says that other paranormal investigation groups have investigated the site and found no evidence of any kind of haunting.

Oklahoma City Zoo:
Some reports mention a longhaired woman in the Aquaticus area. A person who has seen the longhaired woman says that her hair is sandy blonde and she appears to be wearing a green dress. She did not seem to be aware of the witness and continued to look down.

Former St. Vincent's Mental Asylum:
After a history of dark events, this location is reportedly haunted. It closed down after a nurse in 1962 suffocated two patients. There was also a murder. The murder of Reverend Richard Frank Dolan in 1988. The paranormal activity includes strange sounds, apparitions, and activity picked up by paranormal investigators. Tulsa Active Apparition Seekers (TAAS) say that they have captured a lot of EVPs at the site. They have also captured a lot of orb activity in their photo. They believe that the orbs have intelligent movement.

HAUNTED LEHIGH, OKLAHOMA
When I visited Lehigh, Oklahoma with my mom, dad and sister, I was about 12 years old. What I remember about this desolate place is that the land is filled with chiggers. My legs had bites all over them. I remember seeing water snakes in the strippets made by coal miners. Strippets are large holes in the ground created by past coal miners. I remember capturing a land turtle and after playing with this turtle for about 2 hours, I released it back in the grasslands.

My dad was born and raised in Lehigh. His mother Sophie Roberts was known as the Angry French Woman. My cousin Paul Leaird at one time was the mayor of Lehigh, Oklahoma, after his tour in Vietnam with the 1st Cavalry Division. When I visited Lehigh, it was during the weekend of 4th of July and I remember lighting a Black Cat firecracker and it blew up in my hand. I was screaming bloody hell. Believe me it hurt. That very same night after I fell asleep, I went sleepwalking in my grandmother's house and my father found me walking about in a dead sleep. I believe the pain from the firecracker blowing up in my hand, caused my sleepwalking. The next night, the pain subsided and I was able to watch the fireflies in the night sky. When I went to bed, I heard a woman's voice say "follow me". I looked out the window and saw a white misty female form and then it just faded away. My sister said that on that night, she saw a strange woman in a white robe smile at her. Sharon thought it might be her aunt Yvonne Leaird. We asked Yvonne about it and she was nowhere around my grandmother's house. I believe my sister and I, encountered a ghost.

The next night, everything was back to normal and I hung out with my cousins and we went out capturing fireflies and placing them in a large jar. When I woke up, I went with my dad to go hunting. It was my first time going hunting. I did not have the heart to shoot a rabbit, nor could I shoot a deer. My dad sort of gave up on me, when it came to hunting. I never went hunting again. My dad also stopped hunting. When my dad lost his point man, which was me, what was the point of going hunting?

Anyway, those are the things that I remember about Lehigh. Lehigh is an very old town, been around since 1882. At one time this town was called Boone, but then they changed it to Lehigh, naming it after Lehigh County, Pennsylvania, a coal mining region. At one point of time, Pretty Boy Floyd passed through this town and legend has it, hid at one of the homes in Lehigh. My grandmother lived in a home, that was built by the blood money gained from a notorious sheriff of the town. Story has it, the corrupt sheriff killed a resident and took his valuables and money. With that money he built the house that my grandmother lived in. Lehigh once had a lynching there, conducted by the infamous KKK (Ku Klux Klan). Lehigh may be a small town, but it still has a historic past and some of the past history is tarnished.

At one time Lehigh was a thriving town, because of the coal mines. Lehigh became a ghost town when the trains started using oil instead of coal. Many miners were injured and some lost their lives in the coal mines. Some workers on the train tracks were also injured and some lost their lives. There are people who have visited or lived in Lehigh that say that this town is very haunted. Below are some of the paranormal entities that can be found in Lehigh, Oklahoma.

Owl Grocery Specter:
Around this old building a tall human shaped shadow is seen against the walls and on the ground. A few people have said they have been pushed or shoved by this specter. Megan Hall, a visitor says she was grabbed and then she felt like she was possessed. The possession lasted for about 6 minutes and after the entity left her body, she vomited all over the place.

Strippet Hand Demon:
Legend has it, that back in the 1920s, 2 brothers were chopping wood. One brother told the other brother that if he places his hand on a block of wood, he will chop it off. The brother did exactly that and the brother chopped off his hand. After he chopped off his brother's hand, he felt so bad about doing it, he threw the hand into a strippet. By throwing the hand into a strippet, the brother thought he was hiding the evidence. Later his brother died. In the strippet, people have claimed that they see a hand floating around in the water. The hand has all kinds of blisters on it and one resident who does not want to be identified says that the hand once choked him. Many people believe that hand is demonically possessed.

Coal Miner in Black:
Residents have seen what appears to be a coal miner wandering around the thickets, he is dressed all in black. When one resident approached the miner, the miner said "why? "why?" Theory is that this is the ghost of a coal miner that lost his life in the mines.

Screaming Blue Lady:
On one of the railroad tracks, late at night, people will see a woman dressed in blue and screaming at the top of her lungs. It is believed that she may have committed suicide at the railroad tracks. No one seems to know her story. Derin Danville from Texas says that his mother, a resident of Colgate, Oklahoma believes that the Screaming Blue Lady when she was alive found out that her husband was cheating on her, with her best friend and that she ran onto the railroad tracks into an oncoming train and died.

Flying Bobcat:
Hunters have seen what appears to be a Bobcat that can leap from the tree and fly a considerable distance. The Flying Bobcat has been seen 3 times by hunters.

Lehigh Thunderbird:
In 1897, a coal miner named Curly Bob made claim that he saw a large bird with a 30-foot wingspan fly over Lehigh. Could this be some type of Thunderbird?

My cousin Paul Leaird is a Vietnam veteran. He was with the 1st Cavalry Division in Vietnam. His highest rank was Master Sergeant. Before heading over to Vietnam, Paul was stationed for a while in Tokyo, Japan. Paul was dating a young Japanese woman named Keiko Kimura. Paul would simply call Keiko by her nickname "Kaye Kaye". Kaye Kaye's family lived in Kyoto. Kaye Kaye told my cousin that there were many spirits roaming the land in Kyoto. Kaye Kaye told Paul that the town of Kyoto is very haunted, because of its dark history. Let's take a look at some of the haunted sites of Kyoto and try to understand why Kyoto has a reputation of being one of the most haunted areas in Japan.

Kiyotaki Tunnel:

A very haunted spot is the Kiyotaki Tunnel. This tunnel is rumored to be a site for a female ghost known as the (Leaping Femme Fatale) who jumps onto cars. There has been a couple of cases in which the Leaping Femme Fatale has caused accidents. Some drivers have seen this spirit in the backseat of their vehicle. One driver looked in his rearview mirror and saw this female spirit sitting in the backseat laughing hysterically. The tunnel is also haunted by the spirits of construction workers or people who died in the area. The tunnel was built in 1927 and is rumored to have been constructed by forced laborers who suffered many deaths due to dangerous working conditions. The land around the tunnel was reportedly an old battleground and is still known as a spot for suicides, adding to the area's dark energy. Many people have reported seeing strange looking apparitions that are either walking around or floating around. Locals report seeing the spirits of those who died in the area, including a ghostly woman in white. Some claim she appears at the entrance to lure people in. The Tunnel Woman in White is known to cover your eyes with her hands, causing you to stumble around. Locals say this Tunnel Woman in White has bad intentions. Spirits are said to manipulate the single-lane tunnel's lights, attempting to lure drivers into oncoming traffic. Visitors have reported hearing screams, feeling the car rock, and feeling nauseous while passing through. There are various warnings about mirrors, such as looking in a car's rearview mirror being discouraged, as one might see a spirit. Some claim the tunnel's length is 444 meters, an unlucky number in Japanese culture associated with death, a detail that adds to its sinister reputation.

Arashiyama Bamboo Forest:
The bamboo forest is gorgeous during the day and becomes eerie at night. The rustling of the wind through the bamboo creates an eerie soundtrack that fuels the fear. Orbs are sometimes seen floating through the bamboo and locals believe that these orbs maybe spirits. Some locals have reported seeing strange lights through the cluster of bamboo. Strange screeching is sometimes heard during the night. There has not been any confirmed paranormal activity at this bamboo forest, but still some locals insist that this forest is haunted.

Toribeno Cemetery:
One of the oldest and largest burial grounds in Kyoto, is featured in ghost tours that explore the city's macabre side. Emperor Kammu decreed in 794 that no burials should occur within the city proper, leading to the creation of these sepulchral zones which were considered taboo areas that people avoided. Japanese folklore holds that people who die with deep sorrow, anger, or without proper burial rituals can become yūrei, or ghosts. The countless individuals left unburied or in unmarked graves in Toribeno are believed to have left many such spirits behind. Even today, some people who visit or venture near the area report feelings of unease or claim to have captured unusual things in photos, such as orbs. The area's spooky reputation is mentioned in classic Japanese literature like The Tale of Genji and The Pillow Book. Miyazu Soul Searchers (a Japanese ghost hunting group) claims they have captured up to 7 EVPs from this cemetery.

Midoro Pond:
A spirit of a young girl is believed to haunt this pond. The pond is known as one of Kyoto's most haunted spots, despite its natural beauty. Many visitors find the pond eerie, with its still, swamp-like water and quiet surroundings, which some believe creates an atmosphere where something is "waiting" beneath the surface. A local once claimed she saw a hand reach out from underneath the water. Some visitors report hearing unexplained things or having unusual experiences at night, further contributing to its reputation. There are also local tales that the pond has long been a common place for suicides, which adds to its dark reputation. A hiker said that they saw a ghostly figure hanging from the tree. As they approached the hanging person, it faded away into nothingness.

Rokudo Chinnoji:
A "hell temple" known for its frightening depictions of the underworld and its connection to the Obon festival. The temple has two wells, with one in the back garden believed to be a portal to the underworld. Visitors have reported feelings of being watched, or the sighting of shadowy figures. The temple is also associated with the legend of Ono no Takamura, a poet who allegedly used the well to travel between the worlds and assist the King of Hell. Some locals believe this well to be a portal to other dimensions. Many visitors describe the temple as having an eerie or supernatural atmosphere, which is a large part of its cultural significance. One local says that sometimes the atmosphere feels very negative and you could cut it with a knife. The atmosphere at times can feel suffocating.

Part One
Beauty and Power
The ancient world of Egypt popularized in culture today has a very unique past. It inspires an epic physical and spiritual transformation.

The world of beauty was being redefined with eye shadow made to protect from the sun and cause psychic enhancement. The skull was oftentimes enhanced through binding rituals to elongate the head to symbolize spiritual power. This can be compared to plastic surgery and the social economic standpoint it makes. Only certain people are available to be in touch with the Gods and in Egyptian history, it begins with the most powerful.

The world of Egypt that I am talking about is the era of 3150 B.C. until 30 B.C. when the power was over taken by the Romans. Egypt was founded along the Nile River. The legends of Egypt still hold power over us to this day for its mystery, spirituality and beauty. It seems to have been ruled by some of the greatest leaders of all time who credited their work to the spiritual world and whose kingdoms may be buried but still expand onto our culture today. Their gods and legends still hold power over us to this day proving that they excelled in spiritual and physical endeavors, successfully merging the two energies.

Aliens

There is ancient talk of the enormous architecture still left over today. People have often times equated the weird practices of their truly unique culture to the similarities of those of beings that descended from the sky. After all, somewhere, someone had to become inspired and what better way than by visitors from the stars. Alignments with certain constellations in the sky seem to beckon for a star landing and the advanced knowledge of the civilities that quickly evolved to become so powerful over a vast majority of people all at once, as if breeding an extraterrestrial army that takes hold of us psychically.

The amount of emotion and spiritual power that ancient Egypt holds over us is so incredible that you can feel the energy simply by connecting through music and popular culture. Ancient hieroglyphics showed remarkable similarities to modern day U.F.O sightings. The writing that left a mark on us all still exists.

I myself have even seen a U.F.O or perhaps the sky god Horus, myself. I have spoken in several of my articles about the day that I was a young girl and looked above me because I sensed something in the sky. I saw the sky open up like someone pulling apart curtains and I saw an enormous blue eyeball just like the symbol of the ancient sky god Horus and it opened its eyelids and rolled its eye into it's head. I was traumatized than right after so I was not sure if this was a psychic envision or an actual U.F.O. or God it was so real. Once I saw it the sound was as if large boulders were moving down a mountain at incredible speed and it saw me and the blue sky curtain was opened and it went backwards into another dimension. I think there was a black space the second time the sky opened up. The more I think about it the more I remember, I try to think of the first memory I had and I thought it was a cyclops eye. The similarities between what I saw and the symbol of the great eye of Egypt are too close to be just a coincidence.

Beauty

What is beauty? It is a perfect mixture of magic, health and intelligence. Beauty can protect your skin from the elements, disease, spiritual curses and anything that could hinder your Earthly and Heavenly existence at its best. The Egyptians painted their eyes with lapis lazuli to protect themselves from the sand, sun, curses and enhance spiritual gifts.

Their heads are elongated through binding rituals which causes an irregular shape of the skull, eternally signifying the bond between beauty and the Gods, knowledge and power. This custom was practiced worldwide. There was no mistaking the ancient peoples who belonged to the divine. They demanded respect.

Many spiritual stories emanated from this culture which inspired many people to become polytheistic, or worship multiple gods and goddess. The most relevant one would be Horus, the god that inspired the image of his eye upon multiple public and royal pieces of historical architecture.

Neferhor is the name he took in his youth. Horus is drawn as a falcon which has a deeper meaning of the sky itself. The eyes of a falcon are simply stunning and they symbolize a relationship between heaven and Earth. His offspring are the ancient pharaohs of Egypt. The ancient Egyptians definitely recognized transformations.

Resurrection
Words like holy fire,
From your mouth depart,
My love poisoned by a vampire,
Like spells they return my heart,

I am lost in a ghost land,
Unlocked artifact with your key,
With your hands you worship,
I can feel you resurrect me.

Book of the Dead
The book of the dead is an ancient funerary script that described the various curses and procedures to avoid these curses upon burial and resurrection to efficiently navigate the spiritual world at your best.

Important people were mummified and buried with much careful spiritual respect. Those around them that were special to them were also buried with them in order to ensure a bond and connection within the next life.

In this way they can evolve their spirits as well as their energies as a team for one true purpose in eternity. One of the first scripts is found on the walls of pyramids. Funeral amulets were made with the eye of Horus symbolizing spiritual and royal powers throughout the whole universe.

I want to let you imagine this world where beauty and power has overcome everything else. The energy that is created from this ancient culture is still legendary to this day, almost proving the power of magic and beauty of ancient times. Many people feel a soul connection with ancient Egypt. Egypt is the land of magic and power. These are the legends of Egypt that we tell today.

The Falcon
Your voice is sharp and beautiful
Royal power for Kings of the high skies
Gold sand becomes the glitter and
Sapphire ghosts highlight your eyes
They are showing you visions
To come home
It never felt safe here
Where man wanders and the spirits
Are lost and alone
Restless, In fear
Without wings like a falcon
When my home is the sky
Than I know
Why angels
Cry
For us
Horus

Please come back again for part two coming soon.
